

Exploring an Indigenous Owned Insurance Model

Shifting the Lens: A collaborative values-based approach to insurance

Our shared vision is empowering Indigenous communities and organizations with trusted partnerships to own and manage a broad, innovative, and collective insurance and risk management program designed to protect investments and assets while enhancing the economic strength and well-being of Indigenous communities.

Exploring a NEW approach to providing insurance for Indigenous Communities

Status Quo:

Individual Communities purchase insurance as isolated silos

Individual Communities

Future State:

Communities purchase insurance as a collective group

Communities grouped together

More influence and buying power

Why explore an Indigenous owned insurance model?

FNFA's mission is to help Indigenous communities build their own futures on their own terms and we have partnered with BFL CANADA to explore more sustainable insurance options for the benefit of FNFA Members and other Indigenous communities.

The long term generational benefits of a collective insurance model are:

Expanding Indigenous economic growth and community wellbeing

Ensuring direct and equitable access to the global insurance market

Stabilizing insurance coverage and costs while building greater resiliency

Sustaining risk management benefits over multiple generations

What are the next steps?

1. Community Engagement

Meet with communities and collect data

2. Feasibility Study

Analyze community data in relation to various models

3. Communicate Study Results

Disseminate information to participants

4. Collective Model Decision

Communities decide which model to proceed with

5. Collective Model Set Up

Formalize and execute agreements
